STRENUOUS PREPARATIONS FOR STRENUOUS WORK

Men of the 9th Battalion London Regiment (Queen Victoria Rifles) drilling in the snow in Hyde Park. The photos. illustrate the complicated nature of the drill exercise by which the British soldier of today is hardened for his work at the front. The service battalion of the regiment went into the trenches on November 4 and has since had a very large share of the fighting.

THE BABY KILLERS' WORK

Quarter-Master Sergeant Rabjohn with his wife and baby girl standing amid the wreckage of their home at Colchester caused by the explosion of a German airman's bomb. The baby narrowly escaped death and the perambulator was smashed to pieces. The baby, 22 mths. old, was not awakened by the explosion.
